IN 1918 the first British women gained the right to vote, thanks to the activism of the suffragette movement.

But that was just a first step to all women gaining equal rights to vote in 1928. A new exhibition at Hackney Museum reveals the story of women's activism doesn't begin or end there. From 6 February, visitors can explore 'Making Her Mark: 100 Years of Women's Activism in Hackney' and discover the stories of those who made a difference in the borough and beyond across issues ranging from education, workers' rights and healthcare to domestic violence, the peace movement, and police relations.

NEW COUNCIL HOMES

THE first of hundreds of new Council homes have been given the go ahead, as plans to transform underused land and tackle Hackney's housing crisis reached a key milestone.

Proposals to build new Council properties at Mandeville Street, in Clapton, and to convert a former Council office at Whiston Road, in Haggerston, were approved on 10 January.

These developments form part of a new programme of Council house building on underused land, including garages, car parks and depots across Hackney.

Over 400 homes will be built at 14 locations in the borough in the coming years, with around 70 per cent for social rent and shared ownership. This will be paid for through the sale of the remaining 30 per cent of homes, in the absence of any Government funding for social rented housing.

To kickstart the Council's house building programme, 11 new Council homes – five for social rent and six for shared ownership – will replace a row of unused garages in Mandeville Street, with a new mews street being created.

Two new Council homes, both for social rent, will also be converted from a former office in Whiston Road.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "Although only small developments themselves, these homes prove that Hackney is building and will spearhead our latest housing drive as we look to provide hundreds of affordable new Council homes on underused land in Hackney.

"The proposals were the result of close collaboration with residents and councillors to create high-quality designs that benefit the neighbourhood and put local people first, and will be life changing for families in desperate need of a place to live."

The new Council homes will be prioritised for local people, with the social rent properties allocated to families on the Council's 13,000-strong housing waiting list. The shared ownership homes will offer a more affordable route into home ownership for people living and working in Hackney.

LONDON Fields Lido has reopened its doors to swimmers following extensive refurbishment.

The 50-metre outdoor heated pool closed last April for repairs to its tilework and a refit of its changing rooms and reception area.

Over 500 enthusiastic swimmers visited the pool on 4 January – when it reopened – to test out the newly refurbished facilities. The pool complex now includes redesigned changing rooms and toilets, including gender neutral spaces; secure internal lockers; a new reception area and additional external showers. There are also improved indoor changing facilities for families and disabled people.

The pool was due to reopen in September, but was delayed due to construction problems.

Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member for Energy, Sustainability and Community Services, said: "I'd like to thank lido users for their patience over the last few months. Swimmers will benefit from improved facilities throughout."

Making Her Mark: 100 Years of Women's Activism in Hackney

A NEW exhibition, charting the role of women's activism in the borough over the century, is set to open at Hackney Museum on 6 February.

'Making Her Mark: 100 Years of Women's Activism in Hackney'

has been created in collaboration with the East End Women's Museum (EEWM). It examines how local women have brought about change in their community and wider society through political campaigns, industrial action, peaceful protest, direct action, and the arts.

Sarah Jackson, co-founder of EEWM, said: "Hackney has a very rich history of women's activism across a huge range of issues and we're extremely proud to share these stories of women's courage, creativity, and determination in the borough: from the struggle for the vote to the present day. We hope visitors will leave feeling inspired to challenge injustice and inequality and with some new ideas to draw on."

The exhibition runs until 19 May. For more info, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/museum; or call: 020 8356 3500.

What an honour

THE former director of children's services, a familiar voice from radio, and a gallery owner who has nurtured top artists are among the Hackney figures to feature on this year's New Year's honours list.

Broadcaster, actor and comedian Eddie Nestor said it was an 'absolute honour' to receive an MBE for services to broadcasting and charity. The presenter of BBC Radio London's Drivetime programme said: "To be gifted the opportunity to reach out and touch people's lives through the radio is something I could only have dreamed of."

Alan Wood, the former Corporate Director of Children and Young People's Services in Hackney, was among those to receive a knighthood. He served as Chief Executive of the Learning Trust for over 10 years, a period in which Hackney's schools were transformed from some of the country's lowest achieving to among the highest.

Also on the list was Victoria Miro, who moved her eponymous gallery to Hoxton in 2000 and was awarded an OBE for services to art.

Miro represents leading artists including Grayson Perry and Chris Ofili and has since opened further galleries in Mayfair and Venice.

Stoke Newington resident Joyce Adeluwoye-Adams was awarded an OBE for services to Diversity in the Media. The current Head of Diversity at the BBC also spent six years at PACT (the Producers Alliance for Cinema and Television), describing her role as 'helping to change the face of TV, increase the talent pool and enhance creativity by building diversity'.

Hackney born jazz singer and actor Cleveland Watkiss received an MBE for services to music, while Maureen 'Mogg' Hercules – who taught art and English at a secondary modern school in Hackney before setting up her own Dallington School in 1978 – was awarded an MBE for services to education.

News in brief

Find the power of words for Holocaust Memorial Day

RESIDENTS are invited to remember those who suffered in the Holocaust, and subsequent genocides around the world, at a ceremony on 29 January.

The Holocaust Memorial Day event will be hosted by the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Soraya Adejare, at Hackney Town Hall, from 10am, and is expected to last an hour. This year's memorial is on the theme of 'the power of words' and will include songs, readings and candle lighting, followed by the laying of a floral tribute at the Holocaust Memorial Tree in the Town Hall Square.

The Speaker said: "Holocaust Memorial Day is an important day of commemoration, providing formal means for communities to honour those who were murdered and experienced unimaginable suffering as a result of Nazi persecution.

"It also allows us to recognise the atrocities suffered by others as a result of genocides which have occurred since the end of the Second World War.

"This year the ceremony explores the power of words, how they can make a huge difference for both good and evil, and the importance of challenging words of discrimination, racism and hatred to prevent any future atrocities."

The event is free and open to all residents.

Hackney calls on Government to ensure children in unregistered schools are safe

A COMMISSION has released a report into 'unregistered schools', calling on the Government to strengthen the law to ensure children are safe in them.

It follows a year-long investigation by Hackney's Children and Young People's Scrutiny Commission, which heard that 29 unregistered yeshivas offer religious teaching to around 1,000 to 1,500 boys within the Charedi Orthodox Jewish community in Hackney.

Key concerns detailed in the report are around an apparent lack of safeguarding procedures, the narrow educational focus of yeshivas, and a lack of interaction with education and safeguarding professionals.

The investigation found serious failings in Government policy, which allows illegal schools to operate without appropriate safeguarding, health and safety, or curriculum standards.

Cllr Chris Kennedy, Scrutiny Commission Chair, said: "Hackney's Charedi community is a valued part of our diverse borough and we've worked hard to ensure its voice is heard. Our research brought to the fore the fundamental clash between parents' wishes to educate their children at these settings and the rights of children to a broad education, where their safety is paramount."

The Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, added: "Both the Council and the community must reflect on the content of this report, but primarily, the Government must act on the issue of unregistered settings, as a matter of urgency."

The report, which calls on the Government to enable local and national agencies to bring unregistered settings into compliance, will be discussed by the commission on 15 January.

DUST off those trainers and dancing shoes; participants will need both for this year's Virgin Sport Hackney Festival of Fitness.

When it launched last year, over 10,000 runners took part in the jewel in its crown, the Hackney Half Marathon. This year's event on 20 May is predicted to be even bigger, and there are a range of discount entry fee offers for residents.

Over 30,000 runners and spectators are expected to pack the 13.1 mile circular route from Hackney Marshes, via Hackney Downs, Hackney Central, Broadway Market, Victoria Park and the Olympic Park.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "The event is really made by the thousands of residents who take to the streets to cheer on the runners: they really spurred me on when I ran my first half marathon last year. I'm looking forward to running again in 2018 and hopefully shaving a few minutes off my time."

The Hackney Festival of Fitness is the first of three major running events across the UK, all supported by Virgin Sport. In addition to the race and fitness classes, food trucks, music and entertainment will be staged.

Freddie Andrewes, Virgin Sport co-founder, said: "We are so excited to bring our Festival of Fitness back to Hackney in 2018. The 2017 festival encouraged people of all backgrounds to give sport a try and to have a blast while doing so. What made the event so fantastic

Free business bootcamp open to budding entrepreneurs

A FREE, 10-week bootcamp, designed for the entrepreneurs of the future, is now open for applications. Enterprise Bootcamp is run by Dalston charity Bootstrap. Each year, it takes a group of 18 to 25-year-olds and gives them weekly workshops, mentoring, qualifications, networking opportunities and desk-space in order to help them turn their ideas into a viable business.

Last year, 16 young people took part in the programme, eight secured jobs in their field, and 11 started to develop their businesses.

Among them was Maria. After suffering an injury and becoming a wheelchair user, she learnt to walk again and decided to help other people feel good about themselves.

She said: "I learnt that no idea is too crazy and that with the right information, skills and determination, there are no limits. Enterprise Bootcamp helps you believe in yourself, and it gives you the tools and the knowledge to go on to do greater things."

The course is designed to be approachable and inclusive, focusing on confidence and communication as well as business skills. Masterclasses cover the core elements of developing a business plan, networking events help to introduce participants to possible funders and future support, while students also leave with an OCN level two business qualification.

Another 2017 participant, Bea, said: "I feel like the programme really refined my [business] idea and it's given me more structure in terms of my way of thinking about it. At the moment, a lot of young people are struggling to find jobs that match their passions. It's important to help them gain confidence and understand that they have the power to create their own businesses."

Applications for the free, 10-week Enterprise Bootcamp are open until 31 January. The programme will run on Wednesday afternoons from 2 February to 28 April.

FROM planting bulbs to fixing electrical items, there are many different ways residents can make a difference in their community by volunteering this year.

The Council and Volunteer Centre Hackney (VCH) have joined forces to run a month-long campaign to promote volunteering across the borough. VCH helps residents discover how they can give their time to causes that matter to them. Last year over 1,400 people found out more about volunteering opportunities through VCH.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, has made volunteering a key priority for the “Hackney’s volunteers change lives and make this borough the thriving and wonderful place”

Council to focus on.

He said: “I am passionate that community action is central to responding to some of the biggest challenges we face as a borough. This isn’t about replacing the role of professionals or the public sector, but increasing the collective positive impact we can all make. Hackney’s volunteers change lives and make this borough a thriving and wonderful place. I hope residents can get involved in some way.”

Last year, Cllr Jon Burke, Cabinet Member with responsibility for volunteering, launched the Volunteering for Hackney initiative, which aims to help small community-based, volunteer-led organisations.

Seven grassroots groups signed up to the project and are receiving support to do everything from setting up a Facebook page to filling in grant applications, and learning how to get the best out of volunteers through the right training.

Raul Couselo, from Beechholme Community Garden, said: “We are always looking for new people to join the garden and help make it great. Even if you’ve never tried gardening before, come along and try something new.”

The Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, has awarded the Council £47,194 to plant 180 new trees across the borough's parks, while The Friends of Stamford Hill have been allocated a further £6,762 for tree-planting on Stamford Hill Estate.

News in brief

Chutes shut to boost recycling

FIFTY nine waste chutes have been sealed and 11 new bin stores built on Geffrye Estate in Hoxton as part of a Council programme to encourage more recycling on estates.

Waste chutes were built into many post-war Council blocks to make it convenient for residents to dispose of their rubbish. At that time, households produced far less waste: most groceries weren't pre-packaged, milk came in reusable glass bottles, and the rubbish that was produced was generally small and light.

Nowadays, food is pre-packaged, homes are full of consumer electronics and gadgets (most of which are delivered in bulky cardboard packaging), and it is easier to throw a t-shirt away and buy a new one for a few pounds than repair it.

But while residents are producing more waste each year, they are also recycling more than they used to: in 2001 Hackney only recycled one per cent of its rubbish, now it's over 25 per cent. However, the volume and type of waste that gets thrown down chutes means they easily get blocked, and the Council spends about £75,000 each year unblocking them.

The new recycling bin store on Geffrye Estate

To solve the problem and make it easier for residents to recycle more, the Council has started closing waste chutes and building new bin stores with recycling, rubbish and food waste bins located next to each other. A further phase of waste chute closures and construction of bins stores will take place this year. If residents live in blocks with chutes that are regularly blocked and would benefit from being permanently closed, they can e-mail: recycling@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 6688.

Traffic reduction to transform Hackney Central

GETTING around Hackney Central could soon be radically improved, as new funding paves the way for several traffic reduction schemes.

The Council has won funding from the Mayor of London's new 'Liveable Neighbourhoods scheme', designed to help boroughs make walking, cycling and public transport easier for people.

The scheme will involve the introduction of two-way protected cycle lanes along Mare Street. Three dangerous junctions – at Pembury Circus and the southern entrance to the Narrow Way – will also be made safer.

Ongoing discussions with Transport for London (TfL) and consultations with residents are also examining the possibility of removing through traffic from Amhurst Road, prohibiting all but buses and bikes.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, Transport and Parks, said: "We're thrilled to be able to transform Hackney Central with this funding from TfL. By redesigning Pembury Circus and removing 80 per cent of through-traffic in the area, and making three of the borough's most dangerous junctions safer, we can make Hackney Central truly a space for everyone."

Removing traffic from Amhurst Road could enable the introduction of trees and pocket parks.

The five-way junction at Pembury Circus would be simplified with more direct pedestrian crossings and more trees.

The proposed two-way protected cycle lane

A cycle lane in Mare Street will link with other lanes in Hackney on Mare Street would link the Narrow Way to TfL's Quietway 2 and Quietway 13, via the cycle lane that already runs down the side of Hackney Central Library, and along Martello Street into London Fields.

The Handan Dream

25-27 January, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare St, E8 1EJ

CHINESE New Year is coming and what better way to celebrate than a big, bold and beautiful performance of one of China's most famous stories, recreated in the Hackney Empire?

'The Handan Dream' is about a man who imagines an entire life, only to wake up in an inn and realise it was all an illusion. The story (performed in Mandarin, with English subtitles), is a classic Chinese yarn. But this production is as much about the extraordinary costume as the drama, designed by one of the leading costume designers for the Beijing Olympic opening ceremony.

The show started in Guangzhou, then moved to Beijing, and is now touring internationally. Catch it in Hackney before it turns out that it too was all just a beautiful dream.

Tickets range from £10 to £35.

Here & There: Paintings by Lisa Milroy

16 Jan-18 Mar, Parasol Unit, 14 Wharf Road, N1 7RW

CLOTHES and shoes. Shoes and clothes. As subjects go, they sound a little... superficial. Yet, in the hands of artist Lisa Milroy, they are transformed into something both mysterious and portentous. 'Here & There: Paintings by Lisa Milroy' focuses on the artist's preoccupation with these objects since the 1980s. The ground floor of Parasol Unit is given over to the 'Here', paintings preoccupied with bodily presence, including 'Party of One' which will include live performances on weekends throughout the exhibition's run. Upstairs, the focus changes to the 'There', monochrome and often haunting paintings that explore issues of loss and absence, like 'Shoes' which is on loan from the Tate. Trust us, you'll never see plain court shoes in the same way again.

'Here & There: Paintings by Lisa Milroy' is on at the Parasol Unit Foundation for Contemporary Art from 16 January to 18 March. Admission is free. For more info, visit: <http://parasol-unit.org/>

Perfect pitch

Rushmore School pupils learnt about film cameras and sound recording equipment with the live-action team

LOCAL schoolchildren not only stole the show, but filmed and directed it when they got the chance to work alongside advertising professionals at the Pitch Futures exhibition.

Pupils from Rushmore Primary School learnt about sound and visual effects and how to be creative from award-winning advertising agencies Saatchi & Saatchi and LIDA.

They took part in a live shoot and had a go at using cutting-edge creative techniques like HoloLens and VR technology.

“Their imaginations were truly fired up, they were shown creative possibilities they didn’t know before”

The Year 4 class also met filmmaker Simon Frederick and viewed an exhibition of work including the Katie Melua 3-D animated music video ‘Perfect World’, by production company RSA Films.

Sherry Collins, founder of the Pitch Futures initiative, said: “The children were bright eyed, eager and buzzed with excitement.

They were shown a world of creative possibilities they didn’t know about before.”

Pitch Futures was launched to give primary pupils a taste of the creative industries and to increase diversity within the sector.

Get a taste for this farming life

FARMS for City Children is a charity which offers urban youngsters the chance to live on a working farm in the countryside.

In the past year, 35 children from Hackney have joined other young people from across London to learn where their food comes from and how to care for animals and the land. The Aberdeen Charitable Foundation has recently donated £3,000 to fund 10 children to spend a whole week on one of the charity’s three farms.

Shivangi offers super support

A VOLUNTEER at Sebright Primary School has been lauded for her hard work in supporting pupils.

Serving as a mentor and role model as part of a team of five at the school in Goldsmiths Row, Shivangi Vaghela, pictured below, has been recognised for going the extra mile. She is volunteering as part of a programme run by youth social action charity City Year UK, which engages volunteers in schools in London, Greater Manchester and the West Midlands.

Her manager, Maria Luiza Tonchievici, said: “Shivangi has flourished since joining the team. After just seven weeks she built strong relationships with some of the children, which encouraged her. It’s incredible to watch her developing and becoming a strong young person.”

Shivangi will be at Sebright Primary School until July. For more information, visit: www.sebright.hackney.sch.uk/about-us/city-year

No snap judgments on disability

A FASHION student from Hackney has been shortlisted for a smartphone photography competition.

Shingi Rice made it through to the last 20 candidates in the ‘Reveal The Real You’ photo project, developed by Chinese smartphone giant Huawei and magazine Dazed. Three winners will receive a £10,000 bursary to donate to a cause of their choice.

Shingi submitted images which show people suffering from invisible disabilities. These can include mental health issues, autism, dyslexia, and Alzheimer’s.

She hopes to raise awareness of the Invisible Disabilities Association.

Shingi said: “I want to create understanding and awareness when it comes to invisible disabilities, be it physical or mental.”

These stories were compiled with the help of Homerton University Hospital, City & Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group & East London NHS Foundation Trust

JANUARY is a time of year when many people take stock and resolve to lead healthier lives.

The Council is running a number of initiatives to help residents look after their physical and mental well being in the New Year.

The Sugar Smart Hackney campaign sets out some simple steps which people can take to reduce the amount of sugar in their diet. Schools and organisations can get also involved by making Sugar Smart pledges to introduce healthy school snacks and meals this year.

Further support for healthy New Year resolutions include free six-week Cook and Eat courses, and a timetable of £1 fitness classes designed for residents as part of the Council's One You programme.

Those who have resolved to give up smoking in 2018 can take advantage of the Stop Smoking Service in Hackney. It provides specialist advice on topics including switching to alternatives like vaping.

People who use support services like Smokefree Hackney are four times more likely to quit than if they go it alone.

For those looking to drink less this year, there are plenty of venues across Hackney that offer mindful drinking options.

Hackney's Clinical Commissioning Group is also promoting 'Five To Thrive', a better mental health drive in the borough. The five steps are:

Want a healthier lifestyle for 2018? Here's how...

Get set for a new you

Take steps toward mental and physical wellbeing with a range of programmes on offer in the borough

• Connect: Social relationships are important for wellbeing and act as an effective buffer against mental ill health

• Be active: Regular exercise is linked to lower rates of depression and anxiety. It doesn't have to be a particularly intense work out to feel good

• Take notice: Take some time to enjoy the moment. There are plenty of things to enjoy and see in Hackney

• Keep

learning: Setting goals, particularly in learning for adults, has been strongly linked to higher levels of wellbeing

• Give: Carrying out one act of kindness each week over a six-week period is associated with an increase in wellbeing.

News in brief

Homerton hospital smoking ban

AS New Year's resolutions go, this one is on a pretty impressive scale. The whole of Homerton hospital became completely smoke-free on 1 January.

The ban extends across the entire hospital site. Red lines are being painted at all entry points, while posters and signs will remind staff and visitors that smoking is prohibited throughout the buildings and grounds. Chief Nurse, Sheila Adam, said: "Smoking remains the number one health risk to people in this country and is the cause of many diseases and conditions which cost the NHS millions of pounds a year to treat."

Last October, staff were banned from smoking on the site, so the extension of the policy brings Homerton into line with many NHS organisations which are already entirely smoke free.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Devolution, said: "Smoking costs Hackney £65million a year, killing more than 200 people annually. It is vital we do everything we can to bring those numbers down."

Your say on pharmacy services

RESIDENTS can have their say on local pharmacy services.

An assessment of pharmaceutical services in Hackney has to be produced every three years. The next Pharmaceutical Needs Assessment (PNA) is due by the end of March.

Residents are being consulted about a draft PNA to ensure their views are heard. There are currently 49 community pharmacies in the borough and the majority – 43 (88 per cent) – are open weekday evenings after 6pm, 37 (75 per cent) are open on Saturdays, and eight (16 per cent) are open on Sunday. The consultation runs until 9 February. To respond, visit: <https://consultation.hackney.gov.uk/public-health/hackney-pharmaceutical-needs-assessment-2018>

Sol shines positive light on mental health

FORMER England international footballer Sol Campbell visited a local mental health service to talk to young people in Hackney about determination, drive and ambition.

The famous defender was recording a report for the BBC Today programme when he met 20 young people involved with the City and Hackney child and mental health service in Homerton Row.

He spoke about his own childhood, growing up as the youngest of 12 children with little money and in overcrowded conditions.

The group also shared their own experiences in a conversation that aired on Radio 4 on 20 December.

Campbell told them of the 'crossroads' moment that led to him focusing his energies on football, instead of being distracted by negative influences.

"Do you think it's easy to be a footballer?" he asked the group. No, replied one young person, adding: "You have to work hard because that's life."

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Soraya Adejare.

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food for Life programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. It runs free 'cook and eat' courses for family and adult groups across Hackney.

For those who have over indulged during the festive season, this warming and nutritious curry is a perfect post-Christmas meal.

Chickpeas are cheap and versatile providing carbohydrates, protein and fibre (buy them dried and soak at home, or to save time, look out for deals in local shops: often three or four tins are just £1).

Any vegetables can be added to this curry, which is a great way to use up leftovers and reduce food waste.

Harder vegetables such as carrot and cauliflower might need to cook for a little longer, while softer vegetables such as bell peppers and courgette would need to be added after the sauce has already reduced (simmer the stock and tomatoes for 10 minutes before adding the veg).

Green leaves and frozen peas will only need five minutes heating in the sauce before serving.

Last chance to respond to investing in SEND consultation

THE Council has been awarded up to £2million in Government funding to invest in creating new spaces for children with special educational needs and disabilities (SEND).

This funding will be used for creating new spaces or expanding existing provision to help meet the growth of students with SEND in the borough.

The proposals focus on increasing capacity for students with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) and those with social, emotional or mental health (SEMH) needs.

To download more information on the proposals, or to take part in the consultation, visit: consultation.hackney.gov.uk and search for Investing in SEND. The consultation will close on 19 January.

For further information, e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 1739.

Improving cycle routes in Stamford Hill and Stoke Newington

THE Council is consulting on proposals to improve two stretches of the Cycle Superhighway 1 route in Stamford Hill and Stoke Newington.

At West Bank in Stamford Hill, a protected cycle track would be created by removing parking spaces on the eastern side of the road.

In Stoke Newington there are proposals to close Walford, Brighton and Nevill roads to through traffic in order to remove more vehicles and improve road safety in the area.

Both consultations close on 26 January. To have your say on the proposals, visit: consultation.hackney.gov.uk
